Meet our New Coordinators

Ronke Asalu

Admissions Coordinator

You know that person who can strike up a conversation with a totally random stranger? That chinwagger who carries on with the cashier, holding up the line at the grocery store or bank? I'm THAT person. I've missed my stop so many times chatting with a fellow commuter, made new friends in airport departure lounges and learned a lot of "colourful" phrases from locals on foreign trips. I have always have been fascinated by people.

As a child, when asked what I wanted to be when I grew up, I'd reply emphatically, "Flight attendant or tour guide." In those pre-internet days, I figured these would be the best ways to meet people from all over the world while providing some sort of service. Fast forward a few decades: spoiler alert... I'm not a flight attendant or tour guide. I am, however, doing exactly what I'd dreamed. Different route, same destination.

Working as an educator and now in admissions has afforded me the opportunity to make meaningful connections with people of varied ages with diverse backgrounds, each with a unique story of their own. I truly enjoying learning what a prospective student's hopes and aspirations are and I'm incredibly fortunate to be in a position to offer guidance and help them accomplish their goals through a comprehensive admissions process.

If you're ever on the 4th floor, please stop by and say hello. I'd love to meet you!

Promotions & Marketing
Coordinator

To begin, I would like to thank everyone for your kind hospitality and warm welcome to the school. When I first learned about the opportunity to work for Sutherland-Chan I was very excited. To work with students, develop marketing initiatives, connect talented people and engage in work to improve the health and wellness of Canadians is my passion.

I have experience educating and coaching people from all walks of life. Working with a Canadian broadcasting company, I had the privilege of teaching students about media and I was involved in the training of volunteers on all aspects of TV production. In my digital media instructor role, I was instrumental in developing the company's digital strategy and teaching staff as well as volunteers throughout Ontario. As a result of these interactions, I realized the reward and satisfaction of the moments when concepts click and students love what they're learning.

I was born in Toronto and have lived here for several years. I continue to be motivated by the city's arts and culture. I love to work with people and I thrive on the diversity in their backgrounds and personalities. Networking and linking people to businesses and non-profits to help enrich their lives is important to me.

I look forward to meeting you! If you see me in the halls, or out at events, please feel free to say hi!
